Landmark Rulings

The Supreme Court has ruled on a wide range of issues over the years, but some of its most important decisions have come in the area of civil rights. In 1857, the Court ruled in Dred Scott v. Sandford that African Americans were not citizens and could not sue in federal court. This decision was a major blow to the abolitionist movement and helped to set the stage for the Civil War.

In 1954, the Court ruled in Brown v. Board of Education that racial segregation in public schools was unconstitutional. This decision was a major victory for the civil rights movement and helped to pave the way for the desegregation of schools across the country.

In 1967, the Court ruled in Loving v. Virginia that laws prohibiting interracial marriage were unconstitutional. This decision was a major victory for civil rights and helped to strike down one of the last vestiges of legal segregation.

These are just a few of the many important Supreme Court rulings that have shaped American history. "100 Supreme Court Cases Everyone Should Know" provides a comprehensive overview of these rulings and their lasting impact.
