Frazer: A Star That Was Meant to Shine

At the helm of the Frazer Motor Company was Joseph Washington Frazer, a visionary industrialist who had overseen the production of B-29 bombers during World War II. With the war's end, Frazer set his sights on revolutionizing the postwar automotive landscape by creating a car that would combine style, performance, and affordability.

The Visionary Artist Behind the Masterpiece

The man responsible for the Frazer's distinctive appearance was George Lawson, a renowned automotive designer whose influence extended far beyond the realm of Frazer. His creations, such as the Lincoln Continental and the Crosley Hotshot, left an enduring mark on the automotive world.
