Unveiling the Secrets of Burps, Hiccups, and Sneezes

Burp: A burp is a sudden release of air from your stomach through your mouth. It's caused by a buildup of gas in your stomach, usually from swallowing air when you eat or drink. Burping helps to relieve pressure and discomfort.

Hiccup: A hiccup is a sudden, involuntary contraction of your diaphragm, the muscle that separates your chest and abdomen. It's caused by a spasm in your phrenic nerve, which controls your diaphragm. Hiccups are usually harmless and go away on their own.

Sneeze: A sneeze is a sudden, forceful expulsion of air from your nose and mouth. It's caused by irritation in your nasal passages, such as from dust, pollen, or a cold virus. Sneezing helps to clear your nasal passages and protect your body from infection.
