Panther chameleons can live for up to 10 years in captivity. However, their lifespan is typically shorter in the wild.

Panther chameleons require a specialized habitat in Free Download to thrive in captivity. The following are some of the essential components of a panther chameleon habitat:

- Enclosure: Panther chameleons require a large enclosure that is at least 2 feet wide, 2 feet deep, and 4 feet tall. The enclosure should be made of a sturdy material, such as glass or acrylic.
- Substrate: The substrate in a panther chameleon habitat should be a mixture of sand and soil. The substrate should be deep enough to allow the chameleon to burrow.
- Plants: Panther chameleons need plants in their enclosure to provide them with hiding places and perches. The plants should be non-toxic and should be able to withstand the chameleon's weight.
- Lighting: Panther chameleons require both UVA and UVB lighting. UVA lighting helps the chameleon regulate its body temperature, while UVB lighting helps the chameleon produce vitamin D3.
- Temperature: Panther chameleons require a warm environment. The daytime temperature in the enclosure should be between 75 and 85 degrees Fahrenheit. The nighttime temperature should be between 65 and 75 degrees Fahrenheit.

- Humidity: Panther chameleons require a humid environment. The humidity in the enclosure should be between 50 and 70%.
- Diet: Panther chameleons eat a diet of insects. The insects should be dusted with calcium powder before being offered to the chameleon.

Panther chameleons are generally healthy animals. However, they can be susceptible to a variety of health problems, including:

- Metabolic bone disease: Metabolic bone disease is a condition that occurs when the chameleon does not receive enough calcium. Symptoms of metabolic bone disease include soft bones, deformed limbs, and lethargy.
- Respiratory infections: Respiratory infections are a common problem in panther chameleons. Symptoms of respiratory infections include wheezing, coughing, and nasal discharge.
- Parasites: Parasites are a common problem in panther chameleons. Symptoms of parasites include weight loss, diarrhea, and lethargy.

Panther chameleons are beautiful and fascinating creatures. They can make great pets for experienced reptile keepers. However, it is important to do your research before bringing a panther chameleon into your home. Panther chameleons require specialized care, and they can be expensive to keep. If you are not prepared to provide the proper care for a panther chameleon, then you should not get one.
