In 1965, Jones released his breakthrough single, "It's Not Unusual." The song was a worldwide hit and reached number one in the UK, the US, and several other countries. It became Jones's signature song and helped to establish him as one of the most popular singers in the world.

Over the next few years, Jones continued to release hit singles, including "Green, Green Grass of Home," "Delilah," "Help Yourself," and "She's a Lady." He also starred in several films, including "What's New Pussycat?" and "Till Death Us Do Part." In 1969, he won a Grammy Award for Best New Artist.

In the 1970s, Jones's career began to decline. He continued to release albums and tour, but his sales and popularity began to dwindle. In the 1980s, he made a comeback with the help of producer Phil Ramone. He released several successful albums, including "Reload" and "Mr. Jones." He also starred in the television series "Tom Jones." In 2006, he was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II for his services to music.
